

Curriculum Vitae

Dr. Naomi Khaing Than Hlaing is the incumbent Head and Professor of Department of Hepatology, Mandalay General Hospital, University of Medicine - Mandalay, Mandalay, Myanmar. She graduated from Institute of Medicine 1, Yangon, Myanmar. After internship, she worked as a research medical officer for one year in Epidemiology Division of Department of Medical Research, Yangon, Myanmar. Then she worked for 20 years as a physician at the Department of Hepatology, Yangon General Hospital that is the biggest hospital in Myanmar and is one of the teaching hospitals of University of Medicine 1, Yangon. She was a research fellow in Molecular Virology at the National Institute of Infectious Diseases, Tokyo in 2004 – 2005. She studied transplant hepatology in Penn Transplant Institute, University of Pennsylvania in 2015. Her research interests are treatment of hepatitis B and C and hepatocellular carcinoma. Currently, she is the Vice President (2) of Myanmar GI and Liver Society, Myanmar Medical Association. She is a fellow of the RCPSG, and a member of AASLD, EASL, APASL and AAP. She is the founder of MyLiv (Myanmar Foundation for Liver Health) to help people with liver diseases in Myanmar.

Date: 23 December 2017